WASHINGTON OF OLD -WATER -We all know Washington as it is now, with its magnificent buildings, its abundance of trees, its thickening of dwellings, and want of water. Mr. Andrew Ellicott, in 1723, said : "No place has greater advantages of water, either for the supply of the city or for cleaning the streets, than this ground." He speaks of the head waters of Rock Creek, but especially refers to the water of the Potomac, above the Great Falls, fourteen miles from the city, which is one hundred and eight feet higher than tidewater. "This water," he says, "may not only be carried over the highest ground in the city, but, if necessary, over the tops of the houses." The Schuylkill of Philadelphia, the Croton of N. York, the Cochituate of Boston, and Jones' Falls of Baltimore, supplying those cities. fall far behind the capacity of our Great Falls, and yet we are actually suffering for the want

But of that enough has been said, and we therefore recur to our reminiscences, only remarking that we hope that some amendment providing for the water-works $500,000, may prevail in both Houses. As to Washing-April, 1791, the Hon. Daniel Carroll and Dr. David Stuart superintended the fixing of the first corner-stone of the District of Columbia, at Jones's Point, near Alexandria, where it was laid with all the Masonic ceremonies usual at that time." We quote from Varnum's book on the seat of Government, which

"The proceedings in reference to the opening of a national city, appear to have awakened much interest in all parts of the country. In an extra number of the Herald, published at Philadelphia, on the 4th January, 1795, we find a long article, setting forth the general plan, and, more particularly, the designs for improving the mall It commence thus: "To found a city, in the centre of the United States, for the purpose of making it the depository of the acts of the Union, and the sanctuary of the laws, which must, one day, rule all North America, is a grand and comprehensive idea, which has already become with propriety, the object of public respect. In reflecting on the importance of the Union, and on the advantages which it secures to all the inhabitants of the United States, collectively, or to individuals, where is there an American who does not see, in the establishment of a Federal town, a natural means for confirming forever that valuable connection, to which the nation is indebted for liberation from the British yoke? The Federal city, situated in the centre of the United States, is a temple erected to liberty; and towards this edifice will the wishes and expectations of all true friends of their country be incessantly directed. The city of Washington, considered under such important points of view, could not be calculated on a small scale; its extent, the disposition of its avenues and public squares. should all correspond with the magnitude of the object for which it was intended-and we need only cast our eyes upon the situation and plan of the city, to recognize in them the comprehensive genius of the President, to whom the direction of the business has been committed by Congress. ' "

On the 18th of September, 1793, the southas laid by General Washington. Here was about the origin of Washington City, its being capsized by a sudden squall. present character fully justifying the preditions of its founders, with the single exception of its supply of pure and wholesome water, so much needed for public as well as private pur-"HACK, SIR! HACK, MADAM!"-This is the annoying cry from some imprudent backmen. who yell the words into person's ears, including ladies, in a most deafening manner. At the railroad depot, the evil is almost insupportable, get any more to do by it? On the contrary, taking a back altogether on account of the clamor raised by these noisy competitors. Many pass the contestants by, and seek some quiet, well behaved driver, whom they engage to convey them to their destination, rathese vociferous Jehus. If they wish to do more business they should avoid the practice altogether, and not ask any person if they want a hack, which is not only useless but foolish, because any person wanting a hack will go to use of bawling at them, "Hack, sir! hack, Fitzgerald, disorderly; jail. madam!" and calling for them to go this hotel or that. A little less noise and more patience is recommended in a friendly way to these competitors of the whip. They will make by our advice.

ETIQUETTE FOR UNIBUSSES .- A cynical old bachelor, as "Ites" of the Baltimore Argus presumes, furnishes the following code possibly be useful here, in the good city of Washington: "It seems by long established practice, to be understood that it is polite for ladies to crowd into an omnibus, no matter how strong and healthy they may be, and no matter how many fatigued and even sick of the other sex they may turn out. It is polite, if courteously told that the omnibus is full, to answer sharply that you must have a seat, and to fix your eyes immediately on the most bashful man present, and so force him to give up his seat. It is polite, when five of you are on one side, to spread out your dresses, so as to prevent the sixth passenger from obtaining a seat. It is polite to put your child next to you, so as to occupy two seats, yet, when you get out, to pay only for yourself. It is polite not to look for your money till you have stopped the coach, and then to keep every body waiting for five minutes, or till you have hunted up the change. It is polite to pull the strap without cessation till the impetus of the coach ceases, no matter how much it may hurt the driver. It is polite never to have anything less than a gold dollar, so as to force the driver to change it, though silver is worth three per cent. It is polite to bring a basket of marketing in the coach with you; to plant it vigorously on some one's corns; and to rub the greasy meat, in passing in and out, on this one's silk dress, and that one's cloth overcoat And it is particularly polite to bring a shad in with you, so that the stench | factories consuming large quantities. of it may fill the coach, and the scales be rubbed off by its flapping against your neighbor, to the great saving of the labor of your cook. "But we must not forget what is polite for the driver. It is polite for him, when the lady pulls the strap, to stop the coach in the middle of the street, instead of drawing up to the curbstone, or pausing at a crossing, especially when the mud is half a foot deep. It is polite for him, when a child looses one of its pennies in mostles and thirteen days. the straw, to keep the door tightly closed, till the tears of the little creature, or the impatience of the passengers induce some person to advance the copper. It is polite always to stop the coach, when a person hails it, even though there are twenty inside and four on the steps behind. It is polite to race, at top speed, when an opposition is on. It is polite to give short sixpences in change to passengers, yet decline to take them for more than five cents; and it is equally polite to pass split shares. The shares are $3 each, which entitles the tickets, yet refuse to receive them again.— Finally, it is polite to allow drunken men to Finally, it is polite to allow drunken men to magnificent collection of real and personal property; get in, and turn a deaf ear to all remonstrances also, to one of Whitehurst's $3 World's Fair Premium thereupon."

"LET PAT ALONE FOR AN ANSWER."-A few evenings ago a number of gentlemen were in company, who proved to be nearly all of foreign birth, when one "to the manor born" observed to another of the same sort: "You and An Irishman sprung up rather indignantly and said—"No, sir, we are all Americans!"

Pa., Springfield and Westfield, Mass.; A. C. Part rilge, Wheeling, Va.: and Wm. T. Porter, Cincin nati, Ohio. and said-"No, sir, we are all Americans." Another one, however, capped the climax by a unique speech. He said, addressing himself to the two, "Yes, gentlemen, we are all Americans; and what's more than that, you came to America a-crying, and without a shirt to your backs, while we came to this blessed land of liberty a laughing, with clothes on our bodies and money in our pockets, glad to get rid of the tyrants that oppressed us in the land of our birth." A burst of laughter followed this ebulition of Hibernian feeling, in which all joined most heartily-and none more than the two friends so quaintly addressed.

Concealing a Negro. - Mrs. Roberta Knoxville, quite a handsome widow woman, was arrested last night and taken to the guard house for concealing a fugitive slave. The negro was found in a chimney in her house, while his shoes and hat were discovered in her bed room. When in the guard house and she found that she would have to stay all night, she begged to he confined in the cell with the negro. She will furnish faw Mills, all kinds of Castings, Will furnish faw Mills, and everything in the showed herself to be a very "strong-minded woman." But her efforts failed, and she was sent to jail to be finally disposed of.

Ho! FOR PINEY POINT .- To-morrow afternoon, at a quarter of four o'clock, the George Washington leaves her wharf for a trip of two nights and one day, with fine opportunities for salt-water bathing, and other health-promoting exercises. In view of the difficulty of getting accommodations at the Pavilion, on account of the number boarding there, the boat supplies eating, drinking, and sleeping arrangements in abundance. See advertisement for particulars, and if you really want to have a fine pleasure trip, try this one, in care of the experienced and obliging commander, the gallant Captain Job Corson.

No CHOLERA HERE. - One of our local reporters yesterday remarked in the Star, that there had been two or three cases of cholera in Washington this season. Doubtless he meant cholera morbus, and not Asiatic of ton of old, we find that on "the 15th day of cholera, of which there has been none in jy 22this city this summer, so far. We make a correction of this slip of the pen thus promptly, in order to prevent misrepresentation concerning the health of Washington from going abroad.

> PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY .- This society had delightful rehearsal last evening, at their rooms in Temperance Hall. The choruses from several favorite and popular operas were sung with much spirit and fine effect. A trio from the opera of Belasario-" Life has no power"-was most charmingly and sweetly sung, eliciting the applause of the fortunate listeners. Professor Færtsch presided at the piano, and by his brilliant and animated playing added much interest to the exercises of the > DETENTION OF THE CARS .- The cars from Baltimore due at 7 o'clock last evening, did not come in till near 8 o'clock, having been detained in Baltimore waiting for the Philadelphia connection. What occurred to detain the latter we could not learn, but judge that the cause was of no serious character.

COMMITTED FOR COURT .- Mrs. Sarah A Gordon, who was charged with ill-treating a colored child, had a hearing yesterday before Justice Donn. In addition to the severe whippings, it was stated by a witness that she fastened the child's hands above its head and for which he is unrivalled. left it in that position the entire night. It turns out that the child was not bound to her, as she at first stated. She being unable to give security to appear at Court, the Justice sent her to jail.

Robbery.-Two men last night entered cottage on 9th street, expecting, no doubt, to find something more valuable than merely two plated candlesticks! The lady will be better prepared for a call of the kind, as there will e "pistols for two," without the coffee.
